

— What's Trending

Geopolitical tensions are increasingly shaping the cyber threat landscape. According to the World Economic Forum's Global Cybersecurity Outlook 2026, geopolitical instability is now one of the most significant factors influencing cybersecurity strategy, with organizations increasingly preparing for attacks targeting critical infrastructure and other strategic assets. As nation-state cyber activity becomes more common, critical infrastructure sectors face a heightened risk of disruption. Read More >>

— Our Latest Threat Intelligence

The emergence of Anthropic's latest model, Mythos, has raised concern among security and business leaders across industries, particularly around the significant potential business impact should this powerful model fall into the hands of threat actors. This bulletin provides an overview of the Mythos AI model, including its technical capabilities and associated risk and threat outlook. It also offers insight into recent claims of unauthorized access to the model and outlines observed responses from the cyber crime ecosystem.

— Service Spotlight

Why It Matters:

Organizations face growing regulatory scrutiny over tracking technology and consent management, with requirements varying by jurisdiction and evolving rapidly. For companies with multiple brand websites, inconsistent tracking practices create significant compliance gaps. Maintaining alignment with legal guidance and regulatory expectations requires continuous monitoring, not one-time implementation.

How FTI Consulting Can Help:

FTI Consulting's tracking technology monitoring program combines automated monitoring, analytics tools, and manual validation to systematically identify compliance issues. The team provides initial setup, ongoing monthly monitoring, and quarterly recalibration meetings to review results, discuss regulatory changes, and adjust scope.

Success Story:

Following multiple acquisitions, a global services organization engaged our experts to modernize cookie compliance across its websites. For established brands, we enhanced cookie banners and preference centers to align with regulatory expectations. For newly acquired brands, we implemented an enterprise consent management platform, including tracking scans, banner language, geolocation rules, and validation testing, enabling a modernized, scalable framework across all websites.
