The AI executive order, published on June 2, 2026, aims to strengthen U.S. leadership in artificial intelligence by promoting innovation while addressing emerging national security and cybersecurity risks posed by advanced AI systems. The order directs federal agencies to enhance coordination, improve cybersecurity capabilities, and establish processes for evaluating potentially high-risk AI models, with an emphasis on maintaining American competitiveness and technological leadership. FTI Consulting's experts shared their perspectives on what the new executive order means. Read More >>

— Threat Intelligence

Cybersecurity Director James Paremain published CVE-2026-49764 through the Patchstack bug bounty program.

CVE-2026-49764 is a CVSS 9.8 Critical pre-authentication vulnerability in the RegistrationMagic WordPress plugin that allows unauthenticated attackers to take over arbitrary user accounts, including administrator accounts. The finding underscores the risk posed by business-critical plugins that consolidate payment processing, registration, and authentication into a single workflow. Affected site owners should update RegistrationMagic to the latest available version immediately. Read More >>

— Service Spotlight

Why It Matters:

Cyber threats are no longer a matter of "if" but "when." Organizations without pre-established response capabilities face costly delays, regulatory exposure, and reputational damage when incidents strike. Proactive preparation is no longer optional; it is a business imperative.

How FTI Consulting Can Help:

FTI Consulting's Cyber Resilience Retainer delivers a single, flexible solution spanning the full cyber and privacy lifecycle. With guaranteed remote engagement within one hour, onsite deployment within 48 hours, and 100% of retainer funds applied directly to services, FTI Consulting ensures organizations are prepared, protected, and supported at every stage of a cyber event.

Success Story:

FTI Cybersecurity supported an international education specialist through an IR retainer and penetration testing framework engagement. When an insider threat incident involving certification fraud arose, the retainer enabled FTI Consulting's team to respond swiftly, gather evidence, and support investigations. FTI Consulting has since been appointed to the client's penetration testing panel, conducting web, mobile, and physical device assessments to identify and remediate vulnerabilities.
